Every day Reth goes to the park near his house. He liked to study ants. He sits watching thin lines of tiny ants marching. He kept a notebook, pencil, and magnifying glass with him so he could use it to watch the ants closely and take notes.

Reth uses the magnifying glass to see the ants. Reth took a look through it. Then he wrote down notes in his notebook. After that, he went home and searched in his science books to learn about them.

One afternoon Reth found a boy named Henry near the anthill. Henry was hitting the ants with a long stick.

“Why are you doing that?” Reth asked.

“I like to watch them run around,” Henry replied.

“They won’t be able to get the food they need to their nest,” Reth said.

Reth explained to Henry that ants collected food for their young and the queen, who was unable to leave the nest.

From that day on, Reth and Henry watched the ants together. They hoped to travel to the jungle one day so they could see different kinds of ants like giant Amazon ants, farmer ants, and army ants.
