Ladybirds, also known as ladybugs, are small, colourful insects. Their bright red, yellow, or orange bodies with black spots make them easy to see. These bright colours also help save the lives of ladybirds because they make other animals think that ladybirds have bad taste and are not good to eat.

Ladybirds are found all over the world, with over 5,000 species. They have six legs and short antennae. They live in fields, forests, and gardens. Ladybirds are always active during the day and often fly around looking for food. These gentle insects move slowly on plants while searching for their meals. Ladybirds are good for gardens and farms because they eat bad insects that hurt plants.

In winter, ladybirds stay in warm hidden places like tree bark, under leaves, or inside houses. When the weather gets warmer, they come out again and people sometimes see them on windows or walls. Finally, Ladybirds are small, helpful insects that make gardens healthy and beautiful.
