Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

Sarah loved visiting her grandmother's house every weekend. Her grandmother had a beautiful garden filled with flowers of all colours and a big pond where birds often came to drink water. One Saturday, while playing near the garden, Sarah noticed a small bird sitting on the ground under a big tree. It didn't seem able to fly, and one of its wings looked weak, as if it had been broken. Worried about the bird, Sarah gently picked it up and placed it in a small box lined with soft cloth to keep it comfortable. She gave it some water and seeds from her grandmother's kitchen and hoped it would get better soon.

Every day, Sarah treated the bird with medicine, bringing fresh food and water. She even talked to the bird, telling it stories about the garden and the other animals that lived nearby. After about a week, the bird started to move its wings and looked much stronger. One sunny morning, as Sarah came close to the bird, it stretched its wings and flew up into the sky. Sarah felt both sad and happy. She was sad to see it go but proud and happy knowing she had helped the bird get better and fly again.
